

Lovemaking Advice for Couples

Contributed by Leslie Karsner

Tonight, you and your partner might be falling asleep under separate roofs, but why not make love together first.

That might sound physically impossible, but I'm here to tell you that it is not only possible, it can actually be more exciting than you'd imagine.

If you travel for business or live in different towns – or even if you just have separate residences – you know that being apart can bring unique challenges, with unmet physical needs tending to top that list.

Thank goodness we live in an age where evolving technologies and services can help separated couples stay closer. But how do you juggle these many options creatively and regularly enough to satisfy one another? That's becoming the newest challenge in long-distance romances (LDR's).

Couples seem to be spending more time apart than ever before, and that's making creative self-pleasure more important for ongoing satisfaction. If the topic of masturbation makes you uncomfortable, seeing a therapist might help you get more out of your time apart. Long-distance lovemaking tends to get better with experience, which is good because it can certainly last a lifetime. I commend you for seeking out ways to achieve physical intimacy during periods of separation. People in relationships deserve complete satisfaction – even when they're apart. Long Distance Lovemaking will help you achieve it.